Fashion Politics is So Fall 08

Posted by Bean. John on March 7th, 2009

Hey, did you know we vote in the next President in about five weeks?

Because if you work in fashion (or if you own a TV, buy newspapers, etc) there’s no way you could’ve missed it.

Way back in August, it was announced that a bunch of very cool designers (Zac, Marc, the Costello boys, the Rag & Bone boys, Narciso.. – and we don’t think we need to tell you Alexander designed the long tank at left) would produce some cool merchandise for Barack Obama’s official online store. And now that it’s up, we’re amazed they talked Marc all the way down to $75 for one of his bags (a canvas tote).

Then during Fashion Week, Barack pins became a hip accoutrement, as seen at Doucette Duvall and Rachel Roy (literally), to name a few.

Then Anna jumped in with that huge fundraiser, and Michelle Obama reciprocated by wearing fashion favorite (but mainstream nobody) Thakoon on the national stage twice, and now Marc’s decorated his Bleecker Street storefront with not just Obama love, but Biden caps to boot.

So, is it helping out fashion’s favorite candidate for President? Guess we won’t know for a few more weeks. But in the meantime, we really wonder whether there are any McCain supporters among the fashion designer set, and what kind of excuses they have to give when approached to design Obama totes and tees...

daria squared

Posted by Bean. John on March 4th, 2009

□ its summative time now and im loaded with work – factoring common decimals, analyzing oscar wildes work, sculpting a ... sculpture so this is a little daria refuge. im just sifting through the countless pictures i have on my computer and i came across this one.
i think it is karl lagerfeld a few years back? her hair was still quite long and light back then anyways just wanted to post this because i loved this picture and th news is quite slow at the moment....

p.s. does anyone know any good sites for blogging templates – im getting very bored of this one!

daria on modeling, daria on daria

Posted by Bean. John on March 4th, 2009

□ “Sometimes you think about what you’re going to eat for dinner, or, did I do my laundry, or, oh shit, I didn’t call my mum. Sometimes you’re just blank. Other times you’re like, yeah, strutting. Like yeah, all right, look at me, I’m modelling! I’m a model!”

“Everyone said I should be a model, while nothing was happening despite my efforts. Those times made me take stock of the difficulties of this business. It is our appearance that is judged, and without a strong mental outlook, one does not last. In 2003, I changed; I was stronger and I was more sure of myself. I wanted to work again, above all to finance my art studies. I called IMG and returned to New York. Three days later, I did Marc Jacobs’ fashion show and a week later I worked for Steven Meisel for Prada. Everything began to happen and it became my career.”

“When I remember that I have become a model to finance my studies in painting, none of its strength is lost,” she says. “I know it will not last forever, therefore I appreciate every moment.”

its why i have this blog on her vogue paris august by inez and vinoodh

Posted by Bean. John on March 4th, 2009

□ gone for a week and what do i come back to? a vogue paris cover and editorial! im still in the shock phase right now... i really have no idea what to write... well actually i do 😊 in my opinion vogue paris is one of the best magazines that understands darias beauty and appeal, but this time they're leaning in the opposite direction of why i find her so appealing.

i have to admit i would have loved a cover with daria at her tomboy best, like the isabel marant campaign or her blue jeans editorial a few years back.

the issue is dedicated to yves saint laurent and i they were going for the sexy look he was known for, but i dont think daria was the best for this job.

effortless beauty, yes, stiff glamour, not so much the editorial however.... its a hit and miss but mostly i love it.

some of the pictures (and the poses) are kind of wierd but then there are the odd ones that i absolutetly love.
